KURZINFO

The one-year MA program in International Relations builds on the strong tradition of international relations scholarship in North America, the UK, and Western Europe. The aim of the program is to enable students to both explain and understand material, military, economic as well as ideational factors for continuity and change in the international political system. In doing so, although therefore necessarily global in its outlook, the department is also committed to a particular focus on the European context. In addition to exposure to the main areas of teaching in the program, students will also receive thorough preparation in academic writing and research design.

AUSBILDUNGSBESCHREIBUNG

Lehrinhalte und Berufsfelder:

The MA program offers three different tracks: European Studies Track (ES), International Relations Track (IR), and International Political Economy Track (IPE). In each semester students are required to take courses from at least two tracks, while over the course of the academic year students are required to take courses from all three tracks.

The track system is thus designed to provide students with a specific course of study, while also offering a more general grounding in the field's expertise.

IR Track: International Relations Theory; East Asia in International Relations; Public International Law; International Security Studies; The State, the Society and Politics in the Middle East.

ES Track: EU Enlargement and Neighborhood Policy; The Cold War; European Integration; EU Law; The Political Economy of the EU; EU Security and Defense Policy.

IPE Track: Global Economic Inequalities; Political Economy of Global Finance; The Political Economy of the EU; Transnational Corporations and National Governments.
